

THE BUSINESS ALBUM

The HarborView Towers' Beacon lights up the night sky and is visible from various neighborhoods throughout the city.

From left to right, Mary Davis, Debbie Mason, Jacob Davis and Jasmine Trammell enjoy the evening as they wait for the lighting of The HarborView Towers' Beacon.

Inner Harbor icon shines again

About 200 people gathered recently at Tabrizi's to celebrate the relighting of an Inner Harbor icon, The HarborView Towers' Beacon.

Local elected officials including Del. Peter Hammen, Baltimore Mayor Stephanie Rawlings-Blake and Baltimore Development Corp. head William Cole IV came together with The HarborView Tower Council of Unit Owners to help flip the switch and unveil a state-of-the-art light show that will be seen from neighborhoods across the city and by people traveling on I-85.

The Towers' Beacon, a glass enclosure located on the top of the building, rises 30 stories above the Harbor and is visible from miles away. The new light show will be similar to the show at the Empire State Building in New York City and will feature a variety of themes related to various holidays such as Valentine's Day, St. Patrick's Day and Christmas; Orioles and Ravens' wins; city celebrations including the recent Star-Spangled Spectacular; and a Maryland-themed show to light up the night.

PHOTOS BY RICK LIPPENHOLZ

From left to right, Shawn Walter, Valcourt Building Services; Chris Ackers, Constantine Commercial Construction; Michael Constantine, Constantine Commercial Construction; and Lou Ghitman, Design Collective Inc.; come together to celebrate the Beacon lighting with The HarborView Towers.

From left to right, Paul O'Connell; Richard Swirnow; Nancy Rosenberg, The HarborView Towers Board of Directors; Baltimore Mayor Stephanie Rawlings-Blake; William Cole IV, head of the Baltimore Development Corp.; Maryland Del. Peter Hammen; Michael DeLorenzo, The HarborView Towers Board of Directors; Jane Ramos, The HarborView Towers Board of Directors; and Reuben Mezzrich, The HarborView Towers Board of Directors; helped flip the switch and turn on the light show atop The HarborView Towers.

From left to right, Bill Hopkins, Vikki Hopkins and Joycelyn Peoples, general manager of The HarborView Towers, spend the evening at Tabrizi's waiting to preview The HarborView Towers' new light show atop its Beacon.

From left to right, Adele Wineberg and Barbara Balcerzak celebrate The HarborView Towers' Beacon lighting at an evening on the water.